DETAILED ACTION

All of the examiner's suggestions presented herein below have been assumed for examination purposes, unless otherwise noted.

Continued Examination Under 37 CFR 1.114

1. A request for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, including the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e), was filed in this application after final rejection. Since this application is eligible for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, and the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e) has been timely paid, the finality of the previous Office action has been withdrawn pursuant to 37 CFR 1.114. Applicant's submission filed on 11/20/2007 has been entered.

Amendments

2. This office action is responsive to the claim amendment received on 11/20/2007. Claims 2-11 and 13-19 are pending.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 101

3. 35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

The USPTO "Interim Guidelines for Examination of Patent Applications for Patent Subject Matter Eligibility" (Official Gazette notice of 22 November 2005), Section IV.C, reads as follows:

Art Unit: 2624

While abstract ideas, natural phenomena, and laws of nature are not eligible for patenting, methods and products employing abstract ideas, natural phenomena, and laws of nature to perform a real-world function may well be. In evaluating whether a claim meets the requirements of section 101, the claim must be considered as a whole to determine whether it is for a particular application of an abstract idea, natural phenomenon, or law of nature, rather than for the abstract idea, natural phenomenon, or law of nature itself.

For claims including such excluded subject matter to be eligible, the claim must be for a practical application of the abstract idea, law of nature, or natural phenomenon. Diehr, 450 U.S. at 187, 209 USPQ at 8 ("application of a law of nature or mathematical formula to a known structure or process may well be deserving of patent protection."); Benson, 409 U.S. at 71, 175 USPQ at 676 (rejecting formula claim because it "has no substantial practical application").

To satisfy section 101 requirements, the claim must be for a practical application of the Sec. 101 judicial exception, which can be identified in various ways: The claimed invention "transforms" an article or physical object to a different state or thing. The claimed invention otherwise produces a useful, concrete and tangible result, based on the factors discussed below.

4. Claims 2-11 and 13-19 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because the claimed invention is directed to non-statutory subject matter as follows. Claims 2-11 and 13-19 recite the mere manipulation of data or an abstract idea, or merely solves a mathematical problem without a limitation to a practical application. A practical application exists if the result of the claimed invention is "useful, concrete and tangible" (with the emphasis on "result")(Guidelines, section IV.C.2.b). A "useful" result is one that satisfies the utility requirement of section 101, a "concrete" result is one that is "repeatable" or "predictable", and a "tangible" result is one that is "real", or "real-world", as opposed to "abstract" (Guidelines, section IV.C.2.b)).

Claims 2-11 and 13-19 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 as being directed to non-statutory subject matter because the claimed invention is directed to a judicial exception and is not directed to a practical application of such judicial exception (though the claims produce what is considered a useful and concrete result, the claims do not require any physical transformation and the invention does not produce a tangible result).

MPEP SECTION 2106 (IV)(C)(2)(b)(2) titled "TANGIBLE RESULT" reads as follows:

...the tangible requirement does require that the claim must recite more than a 35 U.S.C. 101 judicial exception, in that the process claim must set forth a practical application of that judicial exception to produce a real-world result. Benson, 409 U.S. at 71-72, 175 USPQ at 676-77 (invention ineligible because had "no substantial practical application.").

and MPEP SECTION 2106 (II)(C) reads as follows:

As a general matter, the grammar and intended meaning of terms used in a claim will dictate whether the language limits the claim scope. Language that suggests or makes optional but does not require steps to be performed or does not limit a claim to a particular structure does not limit the scope of a claim or claim limitation. The following are examples of language that may raise a question as to the limiting effect of the language in a claim:

- (A) statements of intended use or field of use,
- (B) "adapted to" or "adapted for" clauses,
- (C) "wherein" clauses, or
- (D) "whereby" clauses.

For example, the method of independent claim 1 is directed to the actions of "obtaining" and "comparing" which could all be done on a hardware implementation free from any "real-world result" as there could exist no real-world application.

In order to for the claimed product to produce a "useful, concrete and tangible" result, recitation of one or more of the following elements is suggested:

- The manipulation of data that represents a physical object or activity transformed from outside the computer.
- A physical transformations outside the computer, for example in the form of pre or post computer processing activity.
- A direct recitation of a practical application;

Applicant is also advised to provide a written explanation of how and why the claimed invention (either as currently recited or as amended) produces a useful, concrete and tangible result.

Allowable Subject Matter

5. Claims 2-11 and 13-19 would be allowable if rewritten or amended to overcome the rejection under 35 U.S.C. 101, set forth in this Office action.

6. The following is a statement of reasons for the indication of allowable subject matter:

Regarding claims 2, 18, and 19, while the prior art teaches the elements of a image processing method of making luminance correction on the basis of a luminance histogram showing distribution of a luminance level of image data in which an image is expressed by a numerical value (claim 2); and an image processing method for discriminating an exposure state of image data on the basis of a luminance histogram which indicates a distribution of luminance level of the image data (claims 18 and 19), the prior art does not specifically "calculate" a peak distance value which indicates a longest distance between peaks in a luminance histogram in the case where plural peaks exists, so that plural distances between respective peaks exists.

The prior art does in fact "include" distances among peaks and/or between the min/max of the luminance histogram to determine whether or not the image is a backlight image (among other types of images based off of exposure), but the prior art does no specifically "calculate" such a distance with the characteristics of it being the longest distance between peaks where three of more peaks are present within the luminance histogram, and to use such a calculated distance to compare a distribution discrimination value which can discriminate whether a distribution deviation of the luminance level exists on a low luminance side or a high luminance side in the luminance histogram.
